

A new adventure for me

Written by Pam

Wednesday, 22 April 2009 21:36 - Last Updated Saturday, 02 May 2009 16:36

For years my online life has functioned mainly in forums. My Food Network Fans forum has become the inspiration for me to start this blog. As a Food Network Fan, I have been watching and waiting with hope that the Food Network would do a show similar to the blog I am beginning here today.

In today's times it is tough to stretch your paycheck to meet all your needs and still have a little left for some of your wants. I would like to start blogging about how to use every cent you spend to make meals go as far as possible. I have a Sam's Club Membership, and I also shop at the local Kroger on a regular basis. I am going to try and compare where I can get the best values on all the items I purchase. Hopefully, this will give an overview of how beneficial the warehouse membership can be for food shopping.

I am still trying to set up my action plan on the easiest way to record and publish my findings. Being new to blogging I am trying to learn the best way to structure this type of site and hopefully update easily.

